

Data Privacy and Protection Policy

SLB is committed to respecting the privacy of individuals and protecting the personal data that it processes. As a necessary part of its global business operations, SLB is often required to move the personal data of employees across international boundaries. This requires that SLB understands and abides by applicable data protection and legal requirements.

To this end, all SLB businesses and functions must review their data processing practices on an on-going basis and implement and maintain appropriate safeguards for the processing of personal data, including employee data. In addition, all SLB businesses and functions and all employees of SLB must comply with relevant data protection and privacy laws and all related SLB standards and procedures.

Violation of data protection laws or regulations can subject SLB and individual employees to civil and criminal liability. Any violation of this policy may subject the employee to disciplinary action.
